LETTER FROM A YONKERS STUDENT
—CHANGING CONDITIONS IN WARTIME

The normal conditions in the University of Yonkers, N. Y., during the war have been so different from those of the pre-war period that it is difficult to describe them. I was in Yonkers when the war broke out and I have since then been in the University of Yonkers. I have seen the changes in the University of Yonkers from the inside and I can tell you that the conditions are very different from those of the pre-war period.

First of all, the number of students has increased. The University of Yonkers has a larger enrollment than ever before. This is due to the fact that many young men have come to the University of Yonkers to study during the war. They are here to receive a liberal education and to prepare themselves for the future. The University of Yonkers has a reputation for its high quality of instruction and its excellent faculty. It is a place where young men can receive a good education and where they can develop their talents.

Secondly, the conditions of life in the University of Yonkers have changed. The cost of living has increased and the prices of many necessities have risen. This has made it more difficult for students to support themselves. However, the University of Yonkers has taken steps to help its students. It has established a system of financial aid and has provided many other services to its students. The University of Yonkers is a place where students can receive a good education and where they can develop their talents.

Thirdly, the atmosphere of the University of Yonkers has changed. The war has brought a sense of urgency and purpose to the University of Yonkers. Students are more interested in their studies and more active in their extracurricular activities. They are more patriotic and more concerned about the welfare of their country. The University of Yonkers has a reputation for its high quality of instruction and its excellent faculty. It is a place where young men can receive a good education and where they can develop their talents.

Fourthly, the faculty of the University of Yonkers has changed. Many of the pre-war faculty members have left the University of Yonkers to serve in the military. This has resulted in a change in the composition of the faculty. However, the University of Yonkers has managed to attract many new faculty members who are highly qualified and who are dedicated to their work. The University of Yonkers has a reputation for its high quality of instruction and its excellent faculty. It is a place where young men can receive a good education and where they can develop their talents.

Fifthly, the extracurricular activities of the University of Yonkers have changed. The war has brought a sense of urgency and purpose to the University of Yonkers. Students are more interested in their studies and more active in their extracurricular activities. They are more patriotic and more concerned about the welfare of their country. The University of Yonkers has a reputation for its high quality of instruction and its excellent faculty. It is a place where young men can receive a good education and where they can develop their talents.
